II. Why is it a problem?

It's a problem because the people are suffering and forced to live in the streets. There's too many of us and the Philippines is just small so it couldn't afford to carry all of us. We are already running out of space and the every single day a child is born. According to Mads Nissen who's a photographer "The Capital of the Philippines which is Manila is one of the largest and most densely populated cities in the world."

III. Who are affected?

The Filipino people are affected. We are the ones living here and we experiencing it every day. We feel the effect of having too many citizens and the government is having a difficulty responding to all the problems of its people. Some say that the Philippines is just mismanaged but we shouldn't blame all of it to the government. This is the reason why RH Bill was proposed in the first place and is now a law. This is the mere reason why they created this law which is a possible resolution to overpopulation.

IV. What are the social factors instigating the occurrence of the social problem? First, is the presence of poverty. As long as the people are poor they aren't that busy and they don't think of family planning anymore. They tend to think that even though their poor at least they are happy. They don't think of the life their children would have once they enter this world. Second is the lack of education. Since the people are poor they can't afford good education. These people don't understand the effect of the situation. Their ignorance adds up to build overpopulation. Lastly, is the rapid increase of unemployment. If the people are uneducated they won't have jobs. Most of them stay at home and do things without contraceptives because they would not want to waste their money for that. They would use their money to satisfy their basic needs first. V. What are the consequences of the problem?

The environment is ruined for people build buildings like condo's. Also the criminal rate is increasing as well. People are doing wrong things to survive. Societal chaos occurs often among the people because of the various preferences people have. The urban areas lost its quality. It's polluted and dirty because of all the people. Traffic is also an effect of overpopulation. Many people equal to many cars then traffic happens.
