Law intrigues me. The development in the law and the way it adapts to an ever changing society has fascinated me extensively. I have always been a determined and fengrossment person.

I have a broad interest in law subject. I am at my best when challenged, have the skills to manipulate evidence and enjoy evaluating the microcosm of human relations. Since 16, I started to have interest in my History subject. To deepen my knowledge, I decided to forgo my science subjects and choose art subjects in college. I have improved my understanding of the law by taking Economics, Law and Mathematics in A-Level. The combination of subjects has developed my skills of arguing, analysis and evaluation that are significant when studying law. With regard to Economics, I learned the way how business economics so appropriately blends with law in daily issues. I have able to view many economics analytically and makes suggestions regarding relevant improvements in law and current affairs.

Next, I enjoy learning different aspects field of Law, how the English Legal System operates and influence the society. I enjoy taking up pleasure in reading primary sources and present persuasive arguments in a clear, reasoned and logical way. A good lawyer requires good decision making skills. Mathematics accustomed me to a logical approach in solving problems. After completing A-Level, I have undertaken work experience in a company named Tricor (Services). I have learned wealth of local knowledge to provide expert advice on running business. It provides me wide range of integrated training, advisory services especially in the field of law advisory.

I discovered how a law firm operates by writing official letter or memorandum or articles to their clients. I was given a chance to assist in maintaining the lists of securities shareholders and implementing corporate actions. My enthusiasm towards law studies seems superficial, so I joined in an international law firm, Naqiz & Partner Advocates & Solicitors. I was given a chance to switch in different departments: commercial department, banking & finance department and conveyancing department. Under commercial department, I learned how they provide advice to varied client base on wide range of corporate and commercial legal matters. In finance department, handling all forms of loan and financing transactions including documentation ranging from Traditional Loan Agreements are complicated, but I do enjoy. Plus, I assisted a case in County Court, observing the work of both barrister and judge, how the impact of lawyer's professions could affect the outcome of the case.

I love the satisfaction when I saw a client smiling at the lawyer's hard work after completing each cases. This has reinforced my choice to read law. Law may involve simple matters like helping someone to buy a house, transfer the ownership of assets, but it helps needy people whether serving justice in a court room. I'm sure that I can't find any of these satisfaction in others job. During high school, I participated in few extra-curricular activities. I had the privilege of becoming head of librarian. Through this, I had the chances of giving speeches to my contemporaries from other schools, which trained me to speak in front of people without any fear. I also chaired the Student Council where I had actively organised numbers of my school's welfare and took expeditions representing the school as an ambassador.

I took part in interschool debating, this has further improving my communication skills immensely, able to provide strong arguments and points to support my own opinion, which is significant in the career of legal profession. In the university, I joined A-Level Students Club. I was exposed to mooting, which is completely different with debating or public speaking. It involves parts of persuasive advocacy instead of supporting own opinion. I understand the importance of applying those propositions in order to argue which I tend to make extensive submissions in the past, which is not accurate.

Mooting might be nerve cracking but it is fun! Academically, I was awarded by A-Level Department for achieving the " Best Law Student" award for my entire intake. My desire to study law has firmly rooted in my mind.

Besides this, I enjoy reading and exercising to loosen up. I may not be amongst the best in sports, I do practice to maintain overall health.

A lawyer must be able to read and write. One of my favourite fiction book related to law is " To Kill A Mockingbird" by Harper Lee. The author uses the characters to present the civil rights and racism in United States. An attorney who hopelessly strives to prove the innocent black man accused of rape.

This has exposed to me both the dark and light side of law, which motivated me to study law to eliminate injustice. Law seems to be extremely difficult and challenging but I'm passionate in overcoming all the problems.

From my experiences thus far, I feel I will be suited for law degree. I always work hard to the best of my ability in order to achieve my goals and develop the career that I wish for. My personal qualities, academically and socially wellequipped, build me an appropriate candidate as a law student. I hope that youwill award me with the privilege of an offer from your university for my chosencourse.
