He irritated the whale and established the Maori individuals. This makes the setting it needs to pass on the division of present day and conventional life. At the point when her grandfather Koro, the main head of their community, develops anxiety over the absence of heir he begins exploring the young leader in the community. He shows them the methods for the extraordinary pioneer and the accounts of their precursors. In this procedure, he pushes Paikea further far to help their family which is an important part of the film. This additionally stresses the difficulties she needs to overcome because of criticism and isolation of needing to be a female head in a male-dominated society.
