

Go trendy with the boat neckline

Business, Industries

In recent times boat neck blouse has become the talk of the town specially after Meghan Markel, the new Duchess of Sussex is seen to be a big fan of the trend. Her wedding dress had the boat neckline and later she was seen wearing the similar style at many of her public appearances. Before her, this neckline was made famous by another female actor in the mid-1950s: Audrey Hepburn. She was a fashion icon of those times and the boat neck blouse was worn by her in many of her movies.

Now, what is this boat neck blouse? These designs of blouse are also known as the princess or bateau neckline. They are the edgier version of the scoop neckline. This design of blouse work best with those who have long neck and small head as it makes both of them look wider. It will also help someone who have small chest or bulky arms as they can cover it beautifully. Again, having said that, we believe that everybody can dress according to their choice of fashion, you just have to carry it with confidence. As, if you get into the history of fashion industry, the ladies who used to wear boatneck were among the Paris elite who could afford haute couture. Therefore, during those times in the Paris elite there were no rules who can wear this neckline, any woman from the elite group can wear it. As such there is no hard and fast rule who can wear or what to wear with a boat neck line. It is seen that anything and everything goes amazingly with a boatneck line.
