

What is your biggest fear about public speaking

Linguistics, English

Client's 23 January My biggest fear about public preparation is under preparation, I start to stutter when I am under prepared. Being under prepared can lead to loss of respect for an individual. Planning comes into play here, preparation is extremely important when it comes to public speaking.

Engaging the public for several minutes is hardly an easy job, there are many people who are very restless and would certainly start showing their restlessness if the speech is not up to the mark and this will take a toll on the speaker's confidence.

Being prepared wins half the battle, anxiety eases when one knows what is to be said and what is not to be said. Errors are minimized when one is sure of oneself; errors get doubled when one is under-prepared.

Engaging the most restless of people is an art which not everyone can master, however one can engage the people by knowing what is to be said at the very right time.

To conclude it is very fair to say that being prepared is like half the battle won already, preparation also gives a lot of confidence to the speaker and makes them completely prepared for delivering the goods when it matters the most.

This is why I always make it a point to prepare well in advance so that I do not let myself down in front of others. Preparing well has always been the key for me and will always remain the same.
