The story mainly focuses on the John Nash's life. In the story we see John Nash earning his PhD in mathematics from the University of Princeton after writing a thrilling thesis. His thesis that earned him Ph. D had his foundational work on the theory of noncooperative games. This thesis was published in the year 1950. The beautiful mind can be described as the story which incorporates these biographical details and which omits other characters to tell its story using invented characters and plot. This paper will comprehensively and coherently provide a summary of the movie by the title beautiful mind.

The movie; beautiful mind is a love story between John, played by Russell Crowe, and Alicia played by Jennifer Connelly. In this movie Nash is reported in Sylvia Nasar's biography as an arrogant and egotistical anomaly who is seriously admired because of his brilliance as well as pitied due to his frequent illness. Alicia's colleagues together with his wife were not aware that he was going mad. However, they tried to understand his unusual perspective and strange behavior in light of his unique mathematical mind. It was thrilling and then organizes to recognize first his genius and then his madness. We also see that his decision not to romance women saves him a great deal from those who can only see his physical appeal.

His talent lies in his mathematical ability. We see him trying to apply mathematical principles everywhere in whatever he does. For instance, we see him seeking mathematical principles which govern everything from the movement of pigeons in grounded flock to the selection of strategies in non-cooperative games.

This movie treats sensitively and seriously the issues they face in sharp contrast to movies such as the Birdy. The movie does not assume the questionable relationship existing between schizophrenia and either the abuse in childhood or genius in adulthood. Instead, this movie shows us the reality of the brain disease. In the movie, we can see that the barrier of intimidation which actually the understanding of the individual who have been endowed with genius or afflicted with Schizophrenia being broken. The movie offers an obscured understanding to an audience in a wider basis compared to the one reached by Nasar's biography.

The above photo has been taken from the movie we can see that Nash is watching from a distance while the Bayer placed stones on the go board before each take. However, his visits to the set never went unnoticed. The red knit cap that we saw Crowe wearing late in the movie looks like the one Nash wore to the set the first week of filming.

In the movie we see Crowe offering Nash a hot cup of tea in the first week of March simply because the month was very cold. On the other hand, we can see Nash offering Crowe a cold bottle of drink simply because that month was extremely hot. We can therefore conclude this summary by saying that the main character in the movie is John. This is because he is most talked about character in the movie. For instance, we can see that his thrilling PhD thesis about the game theory enabled him to be respected and becomes celeb. Many ladies fall with her simply because of his mathematical ability which is extraordinary.
