

World culture paper essay

ASSIGN BUSTER

One way to understand intercultural communication issues is to examine a specific world culture. For this paper you will choose a culture to which you have a personal connection. For example a culture of which you are a descendent, or the culture of a neighbor or family member, or perhaps a place you have visited and are intrigued by. Any culture except your current home culture is an appropriate choice.

You are also free to develop a particular focus for this paper. Keep in mind the length of this assignment (1, 500–2, 000 words) makes it impossible to discuss everything surrounding this culture. As a result you may choose 3–6 aspects of culture to examine, depending on how much depth you wish to go into with each one. Be sure to choose topics that are social in nature and involve communication and human interaction. For example, do not deal with simple facts of geography, such as how many miles of rail lines are in this country, or what the main exports are, or who was president in 1756—this type of information can be found in any encyclopedia and does not really deal with communication or social matters.

Your topics should involve situations where people interact with people: in families, schools, the workplace, churches, and so on. As you develop your paper carefully document the claims in this paper. As a general guideline, plan to use a minimum of five or six different sources. Also if you are using specialized information, or the specific language of another source, you should provide in-text source citations, using APA 6th edition guidelines.
