

German stereotypes

Sociology

Furthermore, Germans have also always been known to have excellent engineering skills and make the best beer in the world. However, these traits are similar to American traits to an extent because friendliness and laid back attitude do come easy to a number of Americans around the world. However, it is truly admirable in Germans because they are thought to be rude in their conduct and not mix with other people; this is only because of their big and strong bodies. Therefore, Germans have some positive stereotype traits as discussed above and they are similar to that of Americans as well to an extent. However, it is extremely admirable that Germans have a very friendly and laid back attitude.