

Technology, politics and values

Technology

ASSIGN
BUSTER

You have also learned that political systems influence technological development with globalization impacting global economic and political integration. The Millennium Development Goals (MEG) established by the United Nations are an attempt to establish global solidarity around pertinent issues that would benefit the human race.

Based on what you have learned from the material this week and from a peer reviewed scholarly article you find, describe in a . Doc (Word) document of about 800-1200 words (3-5 pages), using APA format and citations, how you believe at least one of the Megs can be met through technological development, innovation or implementation. In other words, find an example of technological artifact (like aircraft) that may achieve that goal. You should discuss the politics or political system influence of the technology and the impact on meeting the MEG.

The peer reviewed article you find should provide an example that substantiates your opinion. Thus, your paper should address the following questions: 1. What is the MEG that can be met through technological development, innovation or implementation? 2. What is the technological artifact and how does it meet the MEG you identified? 3. How is the development or implementation of the technological artifact influenced by politics or a political system? 4. How does meeting the MEG through the example of technology you provide integrate our global world?

Make sure that you revisit the course readings, lectures and any other relevant materials. You must include at least one course reading in your analysis. In addition to using the course readings you must also include at
