

Example of essay on obama versus batman: hero or villain

Politics, President

Heroic indeed is the person who shows an act of bravery as well as an admirable trait in the course of handling a situation. Think of characters who saved the day in a variety of ways profound and beyond ordinary great video heroes and you understand the idealistic definition of hero from a conceptual human perception and you see a hero on the conventional terms. Think of Superman, Spiderman, or Batman or term. Perhaps, you may want to think of Abraham Lincoln during the American emancipation of 1776 and you see a hero. This essay unveil that the true determinism of a hero lies in the realistic factors of everyday life. Although we may classify fictions characters as heroes, the only true heroes are real individuals who make real changes. All these heroes portray an overt nuance of courage in a major way that the public never fails to realize the courage and bravado of the true hero. However, certain true heroes never emerge to attract as much attention as these overt personalities. In thinking about batman and Obama, Il probably think that Obama gets more score cards. Certain personalities live under the myth of responsibility knowing nothing about their heroic deeds. Some of them produce heroes from resilient nurturing and instilling of morality to sustain them to greater levels. Therefore, a hero in such a scenario is more personal and idiosyncratic to every personality. A hero becomes a person who shows the courage to contribute to the development of another person in a manner that is only unique to the two of them. A hero understands the circumstances of time and works relentlessly to overcome all of them. Ideally, a hero should not rely heavily on fictional characters, as several heroes exist. I believe in the batman antics but I tend to rely more on the realism of life to determine the actual orientation of humanity. The president

I believe has encountered numerous challenges in his quest for a liberal and better America. Faced with opposition from a variety of Republican political figures, the president contends with the role of a leader who has good intentions for the country and personal vendetta.

The heroic word draws a variety of acknowledgements from all over the world. The feminine aspects due to the gender nominalization, the nuance changes considerably. From prior understanding of the term, it emerges from Greek mythology of Herodotus. Such a connection would be suitable but that is a slight background from common stemming of the word. The ideal senses point to a variety of brave acts filled with acts of compassion that point to a person becoming a hero. In determining a hero, the following factors are necessary to determine a true picture of a heroic deed and person.

A heroic deed usually has a tone of compassion that moves the spectators to acknowledge the action. Many heroes have a resolution to help somebody in need and do not really expect any act of payment in return. A man helping accident victims, saving their lives only to demand a form of payment later on does not fit into this category of heroes but a despicable opportunist.

When President Obama appears to get into the shutdown propaganda the mere problem of the republican threatens the American stability. When somebody like the president makes the early morning wake up call to go to a work that will take his whole day and some part of the night is striking. The batman is an imaginary perspective that realizes the model of activity and insinuations. It fits the true definition of a hero.

Despite all the challenges that many go through, many people expect the hero to make tremendous sacrifices to succeed. Ideally, heroes undergo a variety of sacrifices to achieve their goals. Certain circumstances are quite challenging, and require adequate understanding and sacrifices to pursue. Often, many heroes have certain point acting as motivation and drivers. In the case of Obama, a good future for the American country is the only sole drive he has to live. Ideally, Obama is part of the wider leaders who live in the wider horizons of the managerial system. The years in office with the criticism must have a realistic stand from the maxim of realism. He however decides to sacrifice his hedonistic happiness for the retribution of many people. In the process, he works harder and tries the best he can to help his child. Another instance can emerge from a teacher sacrificing much personal inclinations and activities to ensure that their students get enough to read and develop intellectually. Such teachers are heroes and deserve a medal. This phenomenon is determined by the realistic correlations of the primaries in the ideal standards. This relieves the activities of Obama against batman. Lastly, heroes are defined by their power of resilience. Resilience is an elusive factor a person cannot establish without first acknowledging the drivers of such actions. For instance, many heroes often get motivated by the mere fact that somebody will be happier in the end. The current phenomenon facing the American society requires a more liberal insinuations require cooperative principles in the heroic perspective. I believe that heroic tendencies are applicable to many people but the true heroes are real and live among us. Batman may live today but as long as he exists in the movies, certain leaders are true heroes of the society.

In conclusion, a hero is definable through a variety of means personalized and suited to the desires and wishes of the scholar. Ideally, various people find it improbable to link heroism to any act of maternal or paternal responsibility. Nobody ever take the chance to appreciate the strength and bravado fused in such heroes who work with all the compassion to achieve a good for the society. Often as we have seen, the ideals and motivation instills the resilience in a person that creates the determination to create a more realistic image of the ideal. From the definition of heroism, we have identified the various pictures of resolution to extract a more personalized definition of heroism. From the picture, it has emerged that a variety of factors determines the true hero. In a realistic angle, the true hero is not the characters movies but the idealistic people in real life who make sacrifices and motivations through resilience to ensure that their offspring or any other person gets the best out of life. Therefore, I believe that true heroes are not the video animations or movie characters who make us awed and happy at their bravado and courage. They revolve around the inner core of our life; those who make our day a success and ensure that we make the best of our life for a success, the true picture of certain leaders such as the president..