

Innocence was lost once again by pitts critical thinking examples

War, Cold War

For long period of time America had been enjoying the luxury they had about their security in their nation. They had forgotten what had taken place in their country for many years ago. To them it was a forgotten thing to the new generation. The Cold War was a past thing in their life. No crisis had taken place that had to shake the nation. On September 10, 2001, the state was shocked when they experienced a bomb , faming skyscrapers, office towers crumbling to the ground, dust-caked people wandering the streets of the city, the airplane sticking out of the pentagon, wreckage in Pennyslvania field, men and women in badges and uniforms rushing to the chaos and smoke and inevitability of death. There before the nation Just had histories of the past events like in 1966 when John F. Kennedy was murdered, 1974 when Richard Nixon resigned, ! 993 when World Trade Center was bombed president, a shuttle explosion, an prosecution and various hostages taking place, military actions and political scandals. These didn't shock the nation since it was just attempts and the state had taken much precaution to prevent their impacts to the nation as a whole. After five years, people were so much relaxing, giving the stories to their heirs about their past generation on how peaceful they have been in the nation full of peace. They only remembered the incident of 1930s that had put the nation on the lithers which led to the war of 1940s. Beginning 1960s the nation was not at peace as there were series of incidents that followed one to another like assassinations, riots , Watergate, fall of president and finally to the Cold War