

Introduction to china

Introduction

I have been in China for more than two years. Early experiences in China and current experiences have a lot of differences. Early days I had so many funny experiences. I am going to start my paper with the funniest experiences.

Here it is. When I was coming to China my friends told me that when you meet Chinese people they will say you ??? You should reply the same. Then they will ask you ??????? You should reply ????? One day I met a Chinese guy. He told me ???. I replied the same.

Then he asked me ??????? I replied????? And the guy stared at me strangely.

At that time I did not know why, but now I know. Another day I went to a restaurant to have my lunch. When I was coming back I met someone, and he also greeted me ???. I replied so. Then he asked me ?????? I thought he was asking me whether I have taken my meal or not. So, as usual I said ????? Then he thought for a while and said “ yes, yes I know where the Chifanle country is. It is in Africa, isn't it? ” I said “ No, it was in restaurant” because I thought he asked me where I had my lunch. It was totally a mess.

Still now when I remember this I burst out laughing. My likes and dislikes about China: People in the same situation can describe an object positively or negatively due to difference in perception. So, what can be liked by one may be not by another one. However, as I am asked to provide some of my likes and dislikes in China, I am providing it from my perception. My objective is neither to hurt nor to please anyone. If someone is glad to hear my likes it is my pleasure and if someone is hurt I am extremely sorry.

I like

- I like the helping tendency of Chinese people.
- When I came to China I was in trouble in the beginning. I did not find anybody with whom I can speak in English and be understood. But I was really astonished that they were trying to find some way to help me. I was really happy to see the helping tendency.
- I like that China has successfully converted its large population into manpower. From an economic point of view, this is one of the major reasons the country have the fastest growing economy in the world. Labor here unlike in the western world is cheap coupled with the availability of technology. Chinese people are hard working in comparison to people in other countries. As I believe that industry is the key to success, so I admire them.
- I like Chinese food though most of my classmates complain that Chinese food is spicy. Actually in my country we also eat spicy food. So, I have no problem with spicy food. China's natural scenery is unique and famous as one of the most beautiful on the earth. I like the natural scenery of china especially the hills and mountains of china. I also visited some places in China. It's really wonderful.

My Dislikes

- I have not yet become fully used to the weather of Wuhan. After coming here I experienced too hot and too cold, but it is difficult to tolerate.

- I do not like the way Chinese boys and girls fall in love and their frequent change of love. Falling in love is divine and maintaining it is also the same, but many are not concerned about maintaining.
- Finally, I do not like the way the drivers drive cars in China. Most drivers are reckless and won't give pedestrians the chance to cross. I see drivers breaking the traffic rules.

Concluding Thought

China has more ethnic groups and population and has a long enriched history of civilization. If we observe the culture of china and that of my country we see many similarities, and many dissimilarities are also found as well. I respect all the cultural activities of my country as well as China. Before coming to China I was not aware of many of the things that I mentioned in my likes about China and its culture. As the time is passing I am gathering more and more experience about China and its Culture. Now, I like China more and more.
