

Around in developing places that have died

Education

Around the world many children have been involved in global issues. These issues affected them tremendously. Some of these global issues caused children to contract diseases.

There were diseases that eventually led to death. Individuals and groups have attempted to reduce the affects of these global issues. Some children have even been permanently disabled. Children had been through many global issues, such as armed conflicts in the 1990s. According to the chart in document 1, a child's life can change dramatically because children are psychologically traumatized.

Also, the chart shows that more than two million children were killed during war in the 1990s. There were even more than six million children that were seriously injured or permanently disabled in the 1990s. Children were stripped of their childhood. As reported in document 2, there were lots of children in which were forced to be child soldiers. Being a child soldier you had no access to an education. As being a child soldier, many children were separated from their families. As stated by the chart in document 4, children under 5 died from Acute Respiratory Infections, diarrhea, Malaria, and newborns were affected by these issues and died between 2000 and 2003.

19% of the children under the age of five died from Acute Respiratory Infections. 8% died from Malaria. Lastly, 17% died from diarrhea, the diarrhea could have been a side effect of an infection. Reported by the World Health Organization, approximately more than 10 million children die each year under the age of five. As stated in document 5, there have been millions of the children in developing places that have died from a pneumonia, diarrhea that you can infer that they most likely had an infection, and measles. There was contamination in the water by parasites in developing places, which would soon infect children with diseases and eventually kill them since the children used the water on a daily basis. As reported in document 2, it is told that on February 12, 2002 a treaty was signed. The treaty was titled "The Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict".

Approximately 167 countries had agreed with the treaty and wanted to assist. This treaty rightfully secured the rights of the children and helped prevent them from being forced to be child soldiers. States will no longer enroll any child under 18 to send them to battle. Any child under the age of 18 that volunteers to battle is excluded. Being that children were becoming sick easily in developing nations and were unable to get any vaccines an individual stepped in and wanted to aid. As stated in document 5, being that children easily get sick in developing places, Bill Gates decided to donate $100 million in late 1998. The $100 million was to be used to create a program that can be used to get new and underused immunizations to the poorest countries for the children. After a year had passed Bill Gates had decided to donate another $750 million to help launch a new extreme structure that would be used for improving immunizations for children and the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunization, which is known as GAVI.

These documents support my conclusion that children have been affected by many occurrences. From being forced to be child soldiers to dying from horrible diseases. Bill Gates was an individual that played a great role in <https://assignbuster.com/around-in-developing-places-that-have-died/> helping children get their immunizations. Global issues have affected children tremendously.
