Integrity is believing in your morals and values, and inculcating them in your day-to-day actions. It means doing the right thing even when we are not watched upon. An honesty and a moral character forms the base for integrity. It is a projection of your righteous behavior in every frame of life be it personal, social, academic or personal. It is what your conscience allows you to do and what it does not, it is about the choices we face and the decisions we make. It is the hotel staff that returns your wallet, which you forgot on the table, is someone who is endowed with integrity rather than a socialite who visits orphanages for the publicity.

Speaking from my personal experience, we often face ethical dilemmas at work place. One such situation was when my manager appreciated me for being able to achieve an extremely difficult task however, the solution was proposed by a co-worker. I was in two minds but I finally took a stand and told that it was my colleague's idea and my manager thanked me for being honest. Integrity is inherent irrespective of a person's social standing or financial background. Integrity is the base on which people establish connections, faith, and strong interpersonal relationships.

For any important responsibility, a person must be perceived as reliable and dependable. People who regard integrity believe in standing up for what is right, even if a large number of people may not support it. A person is entitled to exhibit the code of conduct as per the organization's demand and maintain high integrity standards at all times. Purdue should expect its students to demonstrate highest levels of integrity at various stages in their education. Purdue being one of the most esteemed universities should expect the students to be ethical towards their academic endeavours whether it is examinations, researches, or projects and refrain from any cheating of any sort. Since the program at Purdue aims at placing the students in top-notch companies, where integrity is expected from them at all times, appreciating and reinforcing integrity in their students is essential. The onus is on the students to maintain the appreciating positive behavior demonstrating integrity as well as condemning the lack of integrity by means of warnings, punishments as well as remedial programs is the ideal manner to integrate a sense of integrity.

To sum up, I would say that morals and values are not developed in a day and hence, efforts should be made by parents, family members and teachers at school to inculcate a sense of integrity in every child right from the beginning.
