

Example of the apology critical thinking

Experience, Happiness

Why this work is called the apology since Socrates isn't apologizing? What is Socrates doing?

It is called apology because it is a way of defending oneself, and making them understand that he was not guilty. In the apology, Socrates is defending himself in the case raised against him. Hence, he is not apologizing, but rather giving out a speech in his defense.

What is the oracle at Delphi and what did the oracle say that god Socrates started on his life of inquiry

The Oracle at Delphi proclaimed that Socrates was one of the wisest man. This was so because he knew that nothing could be posited as the Socratic ironic source. Certainly, it led Socrates to presuppose his ironic stance by confessing his own ignorance.

Why do you suppose that Socrates sought out the poets, politicians, and artisans to help him understand what the oracle meant? Who would you consult if you faced a similar challenge?

He sought out the individuals so that he could make them reason and determine their wisdom, as well as understanding his true activity.

Furthermore, Socrates was interested in getting the different interpretation of the oracle. Personally, I could consult the religious group and the poets because they have the wisdom to interpret, and understand..

What is Socrates accused of that he is on trial for?

Socrates was accused of corrupting the youth, as well as not believing in the supreme gods in which other individuals in the city believed. He was gifted in depicting ignorance, especially among the powerful ion society.

What does Socrates mean by unexamined life?

According to Socrates, unexamined life refers to a circumstances in which an human being is not open for various question in own actions and thoughts.

People who do not re-examine their life denies themselves motivation; hence, wasting their entire life. Perhaps, people who don't examine their life's has no point of living in this world.

Why does Socrates think that a life "inquiring after the virtues" is valuable?

According to him, the best way individuals should live was to focus on values and self-development instead of material wealth. Virtue is the key to real happiness; this is because it brings happiness, which can never be brought by other things. Additionally, it controls what is bad and good.

Why doesn't Socrates fear death?

Undoubtedly, Socrates did not fear death because he believes it was a state of unconsciousness and nothingness. Socrates believed that division of both soul and body existed; it implied that individual is a soul while the body is the house. Hence, Socrates was assured that death would not harm him in anyway. His body would not exist anymore, but the soul will relocate to a different place. In his entire life, he was loyal to God and family; therefore, his death will not be a loss to the family. What was important for him was to seek the truth.