

Which to stand since
greece. the founding

Which side would you have chosen? This paper explains why this author would have supported the north for 3 key reasons: Slavery, unity, and the legacy of the revolution. The first reason is that slavery is wrong. It is an abomination to humanity. The slaves were also mistreated.

They were like animals. They were also transported to this country against their will. They were brought via slave ships that many slaves died on. They had no say they were forced on board. Just like animals. This is one of the reasons why some would support the north. Then there is unity.

According to the north the original reason for the civil war was to preserve the union. If the union was preserved the US might stand a chance in the future. Also this would signal the end of the republic experiment as the US being the only republic able to stand since Greece. The founding fathers took a risk of making this country so, and they even disputed about policy, like Jefferson in states rights. Lincoln said it best, "A house divided cannot stand!" Last of all there are the founding fathers.

Washington would be ashamed of the south for breaking away. The colonies were slaves to the British, and now the Africans as slaves to the colonists. However you can't really blame the south, they were following Jefferson. They were the same founding fathers that said all men are created equal. Needless to say, they would be ashamed of the confederacy.

This concludes this history paper. Hopefully you have gained insight in the paper.
