Explain how you will use these skills to make your interpersonal verbal communication more effective. Use a specific example of someone in your life (past or present) that is difficult to communicate with. Describe how using these skills could improve your communication with this person. Q 2

Nonverbal communication is one of the most powerful ways that we communicate in our interpersonal relationships. Sometimes, however, we may find ourselves unintentionally communicating something that we do not mean to.

This tends to happen quite often in intercultural communication situations (when we are communicating across different cultures). Provide an example of a time when you nonverbally communicated something other than what you meant. Or, use an example of when someone else nonverbally communicated something to you that was different than what they meant.

What happened in this situation? Be specific in your example and also discuss what you will do in the future to avoid this. Week 2 Assignment: Week 2 Assignment Article Critique (Talking Styles). (600+ Words) Week 2 Quiz 10 G's and Ass. Eek 3 Q 1 Some students think that they do not have much of a cultural background cause they were not born outside of the United States or because they do not speak another language. The truth is that everyone has a culture! This can be in regards to your race, ethnicity, gender, age, nationality, religion, sexual orientation, ability, etc. Take some time to write about your own culture and share with us what makes you who you are. Try to not focus on just one aspect of yourself, but try to utilize as many cultural elements as possible. Also, address why culture is important in communication.

How does your culture affect communication with others? Q 2 Some of the work from communication expert, James McCormick, has been very influential in research within the interpersonal communication field. He is especially well-known for his communication research scales. Go to the Willingness to Listen website and complete the 'Willingness to Listen Measure.' Follow the directions on the website to score your results. Based on your results, do you have a high, moderate, or low willingness to listen to others? How do you think your willingness to listen score could impact your interpersonal relationships?

Do you think that this measure was accurate for you? What about the measure do you think was or was not accurate?
