Business

During this time her son began selling some of Mrs.

. Green personal possessions from the home. He deliberately ran over her garden with his car and gave away her gardening tools. He prevented her from using the driveway and insisted she park her car on the road, despite her being in severe hip pain latching hip surgery. The son constantly objected to her presence in the home.

He would swear at her and call her nasty names. He often pushed her out of the way when they met in the hallway. Mrs. Green, on these occasions, felt terrified and she would not give her son eye contact or fear he would hit her as her husband use to.

There was an occasion when her son, in a rage, jammed her fingers in the bathroom door telling her she had used up all the hot water and that she was “ a silly old woman who should be put away”. Mrs.

Green attended her Doctor with badly cut and bruised fingers, she told her Doctor she had been clumsy and jammed her fingers between two pieces of furniture she was moving. Mrs.. Green found out her son had told neighbors that she was “ senile” and to ignore her if they saw her crying in the street.

At times her daughter-in-law would try to intervene but her son would shout and often hit his wife causing bruising to her face and arms. Eventually Mrs.

. Green’s son refused to allow her to eat with the family and she was barred from using the kitchen to cook food. Mrs.. Green left the family home after her son accused her of stealing money from his wallet. He packed her bags and told her to leave or he would call the police.

Mrs.. Green went to the Salvation Army for help, she knew they had places where they took in ‘homeless’ people. She explained that she had become homeless due to not being able to pay her mortgage.

She felt she couldn’t tell the truth because she was ashamed of her son’s behavior and blamed herself for the situation she had found herself in using the provided case study, answer the following 5 questions.
