Module Advantages of Studying Abroad and Being Bilingual Person I have many friends who have gone to study abroad. Apparently, this has inspired me to perform better so that I will have an opportunity to study abroad. In fact, they have given me various advantages of being a bilingual person. First, they state that learning abroad is a method of learning especially in research methods and research ethics. For example, the issue of cultural analysis will not be a hurdle. Mingling with people from different origins will enhance my studies, especially in connection to culture studies (Cressey 123). Similarly, I will be able to get involved in participatory observation and quantitative data collection. As such, I will have a higher chance of getting the best education when it comes to learning.

I have noted that learning abroad and being multilingual helps a person in acquiring new contacts. In these days, people are advancing by creating network of friends and acquaintances. As such, it will be easier to be connected to friends and acquaintances especially when looking for greener pastures (Cressey 127). Similarly, this is an avenue of making lifetime connections with people across the globe. This will be vital in getting updates from all over the world. As such, I will have new experiences indifferent parts of the world.

Studying abroad is an avenue of advancing in academics and education. I have noted that people who have attended school in the world's renowned institutions have high quality of education. This is owing to the resources and high quality of tutors in the schools. Apparently, studying abroad is an advantage as most of the learners have all the required equipments and resources at their exposure. This makes learning easier and effective.

Similarly, people that are educated abroad have a higher chance of getting well-paying jobs in the world. Since such people are bilingual, it makes working in different parts of the world easier (Cressey 111). In addition to this, learning abroad is a way of enhancing career development. The diversity of an individual in language and learning is an advantage. Therefore, I have to make sure I get a chance of studying abroad to achieve my highest potential.
