Initially. the delinquents did non care about dance hall dance. but after Pierre gives them a presentation with his top dance pupil Morgan. the childs grew interested into the thought of dance hall dance. He enters the childs in a metropolis broad dance competition and by the terminal of the twenty-four hours. succeeds in turning the delinquents into respectful and well-bred. immature ladies and gentlemen. In a public school of lower in-between category vicinity of New York. high school children are holding an organized party and Rock (Rob Brown) is refused admittance. In a tongue of fury. he wrecks the auto of their school principal. Suave and well-bred dance hall dance teacher Pierre DuLaine (Antonio Banderas) witnesses this on his manner place and decides he needs to assist problem children like him.

The following forenoon. he finds his manner to the principal's schools and nowadays himself as a voluntary dance instructor for the school's most ill-famed pupils. Day after twenty-four hours. he confronts the school " rejects" during their day-to-day detainment clip and gently infuses into them manners. teamwork. regard and assurance through the modus operandis of Salsa. Waltz and Tango as he easily transforms the delinquent pupils into dance hall title-holders. For a movie that is purportedly based on a true to life narrative. the secret plan is full of incredible turns and implausible scenes. The scripting is a spot shallow and fails to dig into the character's motives and emotions. Fictional characters are excessively caricaturish to be credible. The thought of the merger of dance hall with street dance could hold been better developed and the ensuing dances better choreographed.

Filming and redacting are jerky and unsmooth. The stage dancing were non exciting plenty and the camera angles fail to capture the exquisiteness of some terpsichoreans. Merely the appeal of dance hall and Banderas save the movie from being a dullard. Over-all. the film entertains to some extent with its dance modus operandis. Treat a individual like rubbish and he will go
