In Native American culture, a dream catcher is a handmade object based on a hoop, incorporating a loose net, and decorated with items such as beads to the particular dream catcher. There is a traditional belief is that a dream catcher catches a person's bad dreams.

The unique part of my dream catcher is that, the formation on the strings formed a Transformer Type of head. By no means, I never actually intentionally shape the way it was and I find it kind of amusing. This project took me about a week to finish. I don't think I want to change anything about it because I pretty much like the transformers myself even if the cartoons are guys. It just reminds me of my childhood every time I catch a glimpse of it. I would love

The Legend of the dream catcher

{Facts}

“ The Ojibwa (Chippewa) believe that night is full of both good and bad dreams. When a dream catcher is hung above the place where you sleep it moves freely in the night air and catches the dreams as they drift by. The good dreams, knowing their way, pass through the opening in the center of the webbing while the bad dreams, not knowing the way, are caught in the webbing and destroyed at the first light of the morning sun. “ Bibliography: <http://beautifuldreamcatchers.tumblr.com/>

“ There are many variants to the dream catcher legend, some which say both the good and bad dreams are captured and some which say the good dreams slide down the feather to those sleeping below. Although the Ojibwa are credited as the first people to use Dream Catchers many other Tribes
