CAN you see our world without art? Could we live with art? Children are impacted by being more creative at school and in the world. The purpose of this essay is to show how our world would be if we didn't have art in schools.

IF we didn't have art, children would stop being creative and not interested in school. That means children won't have imagination and wouldn't be excited in schools. We would see things boring; it would look like a world without possibilities. The world would be better with art. Children would love to use their imagination.

People now need creativity in the world and use their imagination so they can have fun for me I think now that I use my imagination I feel like I am in my world of art and music. In what world do you want to live? In a creative and imitative world? Or in a world where there is no imagination and creativity?
