The decisions and rules developed and shaped by the elite groups do not consider other people welfare is attracting various challenges, which bring unjust practices and unequal status quo. The powerless in the society are victimized, and the rules change to make them more vulnerable and unable to make decisions in the society. The changes made as part of the rules create more obstacles to participation contributing to internalize and unjust practices to other people in the society. Additionally, unequal patterns of wealth distribution because of social power and inequality challenge relationships' and ways of handling commitments to various trends in life (Hurst, Gibbon, & Nurse, 2016). Besides, people of different ages, race, and sex turn against each other because of lack of proper wealth distribution and abilities to enjoy freedom and resources in the society. Furthermore, high unequal opportunities inhibit participation while increases political participation without considering all people. The differences promote and attract unequal participation into societal aspects and elements to manage people feelings. Social power and inequality have influenced people lives and ways of managing resources creating unrest and sometimes death because of wars and unclear hate among people of various societies.
